

As I've done before, I will fight any effort to install wind turbines off our beautiful coastline. Our coastal waters are not just a natural treasure—they are the lifeblood of countless families and small businesses who depend on the ocean for their livelihood.

I will always stand with the men and women who work our seas—our fishermen, lobstermen, scallopers, clammers, and others—who provide food for our country and economic strength for our state. These are hardworking, multi-generational industries rooted in tradition, skill, and stewardship of our natural resources.

Any new regulations or environmental initiatives must be grounded in reality, not ideology. I will insist that policies affecting our marine industries are science-based, economically fair, and do not threaten to put our coastal workers out of business.

Protecting our oceans also means protecting the people who depend on them. I will continue to be a strong voice for New Hampshire's coastal communities—preserving their way of life, their jobs, and their future.
